World's biggest aircraft carrier causes challenges

May 1 (UPI) — James Whomsley, a British YouTube engineering channel host, has built the world's biggest remote-controlled aircraft carrier model, according to Guinness World Records.

He also landed two remote control model planes on the 16.46-foot model carrier, scoring another world's record.

The project took him three months. The model aircraft carrier is made from wood, foam and fiberglass. Expanding foam was used to make it waterproof.

Once the aircraft carrier model was built, Whomsley had to learn how to fly the remote-controlled planes and then, after several failed attempts to land on the carrier he had to modify the planes.

"To have this idea, and then it actually work, that's amazing," Whomsley said. He added first-person view cameras to the model aircraft to be able to better see during the landings. The model planes he used were modified ready-to-fly models.

The test flights and landings were done at Rudyard Lake in Staffordshire.

One of the model planes crashed into the water during testing.

The YouTube video shows his several attempts to land the planes as well as part of the building process.

Whomsley had already set a previous Guinness World Record with the fastest remote controlled jet-powered car. The car Fear is a gift from God. It is actually one of God's great gifts. It alerts us to dangers that may be waiting in dark alleys. It awakens us at night when we hear strange sounds that make no sense. It causes us to take precautions when accidents happen. It summons our senses when things are out of "the ordinary." It's God's "early warning system" that notifies us that something unusual or unique is about to happen. Fear, after all is said and done, is necessary for us to survive.

Some fears are helpful, some are harmful. Dr. Samuel Johnson, for example, would never step into a room with his left foot. He sincerely believed that something terrible would happen to him in that room if he "stuck" his left foot in first. Julius Caesar was terrified by the sound of thunder and would hide. Even Peter the Great, with all of his power, cried out in fear when he was forced to cross a bridge. Those, we might say, are harmful.

David also had his fears. His friends forsook him, his confidants betrayed him and his family was not loyal to him. But he overcame all of his fears by his faith in the faithfulness of God. "When I am afraid," he said, "I will trust in You - In my God, whose Word I praise." He was not fear free. He was faith focused.

When doubts surfaced and threats surrounded him, when times were uncertain and days filled with dangers, he always turned to God in faith knowing that God had His hands over him and His arms around him.

One day, John promised us, "God will wipe away all tears." Sickness and sadness, sorrow and suffering - whatever causes people pain or problems - will be gone, banished forever. We all look forward to that special day!

So it is strange that David said that "God will record my sorrows, and list my tears on His scroll and in His record." Whatever could be God's reason for doing this to David? And might He do the same for us? Does it make sense that God would make a permanent record of grief - David's grief and our grief as well?

God knew of David's suffering and He knows when we suffer. Our God is a God who cares for us and has compassion for us when we are gripped with grief. Why keep such a record?

Because God will respond to our suffering!

Too often when we are overcome with illness or are struggling with sickness, we turn to the products we have stored in our medicine cabinet or to the countless remedies on the shelves of our pharmacies. And if and when they do not work we turn to a physician and seek his counsel and cure. It is the normal thing to do.

Unfortunately, all too often we only pray when all else fails. It is as if God was not aware of our sickness or had no time to be concerned with our health.

Not so, says David. God has a permanent record of each and every tear that falls from our eyes because they matter to Him. This is His way of saying, I do care!

A huge shout to Gabby Herrera. This former Lady Lion set a single season home run record for the University of Nevada Reno. As a Lady Lion, she hit plenty home runs but there are two that just stand out: Lions vs Sonora at Sonora and in Santa Cruz. They were both attention getters.

With her the sky was the limit, the only thing that limited her homeruns was the shortened seasons due to covid. Congratulations Gabby.

She was named player of the week for the Mountain West League as a member of the University of Nevada, Reno team (pictured above).

Oh where, oh where is the buried Davis gold treasure?

Though Andrew Jackson "Big Jack" Davis started as an honest miner, his career changed shortly after moving from California to Nevada. A well-educated and intelligent man, "Jack" Davis had been mining in the Sierra Nevada Mountains, but when he didn't find his fortune in gold, he moved on to the Comstock Lode in Nevada Territory in late 1859. This time, however, rather than working as a miner, he felt that his fortune might be made in providing services to the miners rather than back-breaking work of actual mining, and he soon built the first stable in Gold Hill.

As he soon tired of shoveling hay, grain, and manure, Davis leased a small bullion mill in Six Mile Canyon east of Virginia City, Nevada. In addition to providing services to area miners, the mill was also doing a bit of underhanded work. By all appearances, Davis was a legitimate businessman. However, he was secretly rounding up a gang of thieves that was soon be involved in robbing stagecoaches, bullion wagons, and trains in Western Nevada. Using his mill to melt down the stolen gold, he soon sold "legitimate" gold bars.

Train Robbery

On November 4, 1870, Davis led the gang in holding up the Central Pacific Railroad between Verdi and Reno, Nevada. Along with gang members John Squires, James Gilchrist, Tilton Cockerill, and R.A. Jones, the robbers boarded the train at Verdi. When it reached a deserted stretch of track paralleling the Truckee River, the robbers slipped the pin behind the express car, and the passenger coaches fell back. As they entered the Express car, the Wells-Fargo messenger gave the outlaws no trouble. They then ordered the engineer to pull to a stop at an abandoned stone quarry, and the robbers rode off with nearly $40,000 in gold and silver coi-lars. Though the outlaws had done a "good" job robbing the train and getting the lead on their pursuers, they would be undone by R.A. Jones when he began to spend his share of the loot foolishly. Unable to explain his newly found wealth, he was picked up for questioning in the robbery, soon confessed, and named the others.

Much of the stolen cache was said to have been returned to the company, but the rest was allegedly buried along the north bank of the Truckee River, between Reno and Laughton's Hot Springs west of town, near the site of the long-abandoned River Inn. (see Stolen Loot at the Truckee River)

All five men were sentenced to serve time in the Nevada

Steelhead at Nimbus Fish Hatchery on the American River in the Sacramento metropolitan area.

California's Central Valley rivers have seen what the California Department of Fish and Wildlife has described as "incredibly strong" steelhead returns this year.

This is in contrast to the record low fall-run Chinook salmon returns on the mainstem Sacramento River that have led to another year of severely limited salmon fishing opportunities or closures. A new record for the number of steelhead returning to the Mokelumne River was set this year.

A total of 1,749 steelhead, including 968 adults and 781 fish under 18 inches, have come back to the system this season, reported William Smith, manager of the Mokelumne River Fish Hatchery.

The previous record for total steelhead was in 2018 when the hatchery reported 530 adults and 638 juveniles, a total of 1168 fish. However, there was another year when the total number of adults was over 700 fish.

The majority of steelhead are in the 18" to 24" range, with a few larger fish mixed. One of the steelhead returning this year weighed 13-1/2 pounds, but it was apparently from Nimbus Fish Hatchery on the American River, said Smith.

A total of 210,000 yearling steelhead have been released into the system this year, according to Smith. The hatchery has taken close to 770,000 steelhead eggs this season. Smith attributes the record steelhead run to the big water years in 2023 and 2024 to date, along with the CDFW and EBMUD's analysis of genetic studies and release strategies to improve the fish population.

The record steelhead run follows a record salmon run. A total of 28,614 fall-run Chinook salmon returned to the Mokelumne River in 2023 — 5,700 of those fish were grilse (two-year-olds) and the rest were adults, said EBMUD Manager of Fisheries and Wildlife Michelle Workman.

However, the Mokelumne River is a tributary of the San Joaquin River, not the Sacramento River, so it isn't included in the Sacramento River ocean abundance estimates developed by the National Marine Fisheries Service that are the basis for determining ocean and river salmon fisheries in California every year.

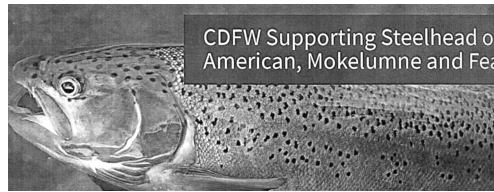

The Mokelumne provided anglers with some solid steelhead fishing this year. Samuel Boyd Yoro of Watsonville and his nephew Bodhi had a great trip steelhead fishing on the Mokelumne below Camanche Dam in February.

"Bodhi caught and released his very first chrome-bright steelhead," said Yoro. "His Mokelumne River hatchery fish fought a solid bout, jumping and flipping out, but obviously not able to spit the hook out of its mouth.

Other Central Valley rivers saw robust steelhead runs also, according to CDFW data. The Feather River Fish Hatchery exceeded its 2023 total of some 1,200 steelhead on the very first day it opened its fish ladder in January, wrapping up the spawning season with 2,277 returning fish.

The Nimbus Fish Hatchery on the American River, home to both Central Valley steelhead and a larger coastal strain of Eel River steelhead introduced decades ago, saw 3,178 steelhead return to the hatchery in 2024. That is one of its highest totals in many years, according to CDFW staff.

Meanwhile, the Pacific Fishery Management Council

(PFMC) has produced three options for ocean salmon seasons beginning May 16, 2024, CDFW reported. Two of the three alternatives would authorize short ocean salmon season dates and establish small harvest limits for commercial and sport fishing off California in 2024. The third alternative would close the ocean fisheries off California for a second consecutive year. The alternatives were approved by the PFMC for public review Monday.

The 2024 stock abundance forecast for Sacramento River Fall Chinook, usually the most abundant stock in the ocean fishery, is only 213,600 adults. Abundance of Klamath River Fall Chinook is forecast at 180,700 adults.

With its unique round architecture overlooking Don Pedro Dam and reservoir, the Don Pedro Recreation Agency Visitor Center offers a stunning view of the Yosemite back-country peaks of Mt. McClure, Mt. Lyell, Mt. Florence and Mt. Clark. Interpretive exhibits highlighting the Don Pedro Recreation Area, the local area history, construction of the reservoir and dams along the Tuolumne River watershed and the flora and fauna of the area are housed by the building. The building also serves as the Don Pedro Recreation Agency's headquarters.

Spring wildflower displays as viewed from the visitor center are exceptional, with the face of the dam covered with lupine and the surrounding hills covered in hues of yellow, white, purple and blue. The habitat around the visitor center attracts wildlife year around. Bald and golden eagles, osprey, red tail hawks and other raptors, waterfowl, a large variety of songbirds, deer, bobcat, coyote and many other native California foothill wildlife inhabitants are common visitors to the area around the facility.

Picnic tables and benches outside of the visitor center offer a chance to rest and enjoy the scenery

Oroville, CA During the investigation into the April 20 shooting death of Richard Kelly of Chico, Butte County Sheriff's Office detectives located evidence indicating murder suspect Joseph Perkins of Kelly Ridge was in the Stockton area.

On the evening of April 26, detectives located Perkins at a gas station in Stockton.

Perkins was arrested for an open count of murder and for being a prohibited person in possession of a firearm and ammunition.

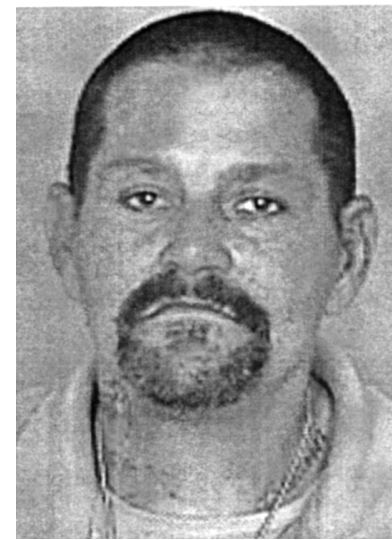

Detectives determined Perkins had been staying at a residence in Stockton.

Detectives obtained a search warrant for the residence and located additional evidence related to this investigation.

Perkins was booked into the Butte County Jail on the morning of April 27.

The Butte County Sheriff's Office (BCSO) dispatch center

Perkins

previously received a call from a resident who reported a victim had been shot in the 500 block of Lodgeview Drive, Oroville.

Deputies responded and located a male victim in the roadway.

Deputies and medical personnel immediately began providing the victim with medical aid.

Despite the life-saving efforts provided, the victim did not survive.

Deputies and detectives conducted an investigation.

During the investigation, detectives located evidence that gave them cause to believe Joseph Perkins, age 54, of Oroville shot the victim.

Detectives located evidence that Perkins left the area in a vehicle after the shooting.

The vehicle Perkins left in was located unoccupied in the Kelly Ridge area later in the evening and was later found at the Stockton gas station.

Lost gold

State Prison. Davis was sentenced to serve ten years. In 1871, 29 prison inmates broke out in the largest prison escape in the West. The inmates included three of Verdi train robbers, but though Davis could easily have left with the others, he refused. Later, he cooperated with prison officials to provide information on the escapees. The prison warden, P.C. Hyman, later wrote to the Board of Pardons, explaining Davis's assistance and requesting his release. He was let go on February 16, 1875.

Though Davis had been a model prisoner, it didn't take him long to return to his old ways after his release. He was soon robbing stages again. He was cautious to rob only those stages that carried one shotgun messenger, but his cautiousness, in the end, would not be enough. On September 3, 1877, he went to rob a stagecoach at Warm Springs, Nevada. During the attempted robbery, he was shot and killed.

Treasure hunters have long searched in Six-Mile Canyon and along the Truckee River, looking for the gold that Davis was said to have buried, without success. Another legend abounds that the treasure is protected by the ghost of Jack Davis, who appears as a white screaming phantom to scare the hunters away.

D'backs vs Dodgers

A pest control professional cleared a bee swarm of thousands while fans roared and later earned the nod for ceremonial first pitch before a delayed game Los Angeles Dodgers-Arizona Diamondbacks matchup in Phoenix.

The insect invasion occurred Tuesday at Chase Field. It caused a two-hour delay before the Diamondbacks beat the Dodgers 4-3.

Bees surrounded their queen in the cluster about 15 minutes before the game was set to begin. Umpires then met managers from both teams and Diamondbacks vice president of operations Mike Rock and opted to call in Matt Hilton to assess the situation.

They opted to call in Matt Hilton, branch manager at the local Blue Sky Pest Control office.

"It was a little nerve-racking, I'm not going to lie," Hilton told reporters. "A lot of pressure to get this game going. But I was happy to come and take care of it."

Hilton said that he left his son's tee ball game in Sunrise, Ariz., and drove about 30 miles to Chase Stadium. He put on a beekeeper outfit and used a scissor lift to ride under the bee swarm. The lift then elevated Hilton closer to danger before he used a non-pesticide spray on the swarm and vacuumed up the bees.

The crowd chanted "MVP" for the pest control ace as he was lowered back down to the field level. The Beatles' "Let it Bee" and Bonnie Tyler's "Holding Out for a Hero" played through the stadium speakers during the sequence.

Hilton then took to the mound, while still in his beekeeper outfit, and buzzed in his ceremonial first pitch.

"I didn't feel very prepared," Hilton said. "I'm not the best thrower in the world. ... It definitely wasn't a strike."

Hilton said there was a high probability that the pests were Africanized honey bees, also known as killer bees. He also said the bees might have turned aggressive if agitated by the net moving. Instead, they were taken out of the stadium and set free off-site.

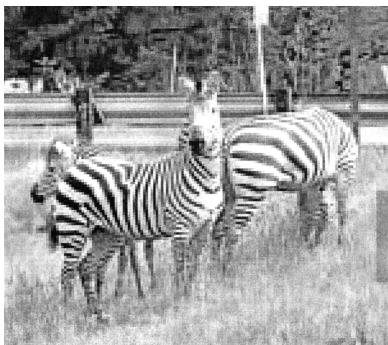

First baseman Christian Walker went 3 for 5 with two home runs and three RBIs in the Diamondbacks 4-3 victory. He also ended the extra-innings affair with a walk-off, two-run homer. The Diamondbacks used seven pitchers to secure the win. That group allowed five hits and two earned runs and issued six walks over 10 innings.

The @Dbacks rewarded beekeeper Matt Hilton with a ceremonial first pitch!

April 29 (UPI) — Four zebras got loose from their trailer on the highway in North Bend, which is near Seattle. Three were captured — two with assistance from rodeo professionals — but one remains missing.

Trooper Rick Johnson, public information officer for Washington State Patrol District 2, posted photos of the zebras on X on Sunday.

He wrote, "This is a first for me and all @wastatepatrol troopers involved. 4 Zebras that were being transported got loose when the driver stopped to secure the trailer EB 90 to exit 32. The community has come together to help. One cornered, 3 outstanding. Crazy!!"

Gold keeps come get some

It sounds like a dream, but it's true in Antarctica, gold rains from the sky. Tucked in among the glaciers, fiery Mount Erebus is the southernmost active volcano on Earth, providing a bit of heat amid the frozen landscape.

The frozen continent features 138 volcanoes, according to a 2017 study, with around nine of them reported as active. With a summit elevation of 12,448 feet (3,794 meters), Mount Erebus is the most well-known. Erebus is one of three volcanoes that form Ross Island, and it's said that it was erupting when it was discovered in 1841 during the voyage of Captain James Clark Ross, who carried out important magnetic surveys in the Arctic and Antarctic and discovered the Ross Sea and the Victoria Land region of Antarctica. 'HMS Erebus' was the name of one of his ships.

Scientists still observe the volcano through the Mount Erebus Volcano Observatory and conduct field campaigns to look for extreme life forms. The largest Antarctic settlement-McMurdo Station, operated by the United States-is located about 25 south of Mount Erebus and is within sight of the volcano.

Satellite images of the volcano reveal a lava lake that's been bubbling since at least 1972, according to IFL Science.

The volcano regularly pumps out plumes of gas and steam and has been known to eject boulders of partially molten rock known as "volcanic bombs."

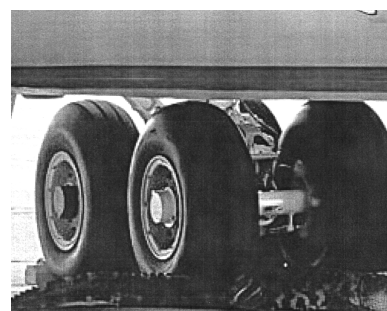

While volcanic bombs are exciting, it's the bursts of metallic gold that surprise scientists, who estimate the volcano spews around 80 grams of gold a day — that's worth around $6,000.

The gold has been found hundreds of miles away from Mount Erebus. Antarctic researchers have detected traces of the gold dust in ambient air up to 621 miles away from the volcano.

April 23 (UPI) — A 10-foot alligator wandered onto an Air Force base in Florida and parked itself on the runway, right under the wheels of a plane.

The MacDill Air Force Base in Hillsborough County posted photos to Facebook showing the gator that made its way to the runway on Monday and crawled between the wheels of a plane's landing gear.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission was summoned to the scene and relocated the gator to the nearby Hillsborough River.

"Our newest toothy Airman has been relocated to a more suitable environment off base. Special thanks to FWC for the assist. They think Elvis pushed this guy away from home," the post said, referencing a famously large alligator named Elvis that has been spotted on the base on numerous previous occasions.
